non

स्टिश्चर प्रमान

1031

12]

13]

161

15]

5]

81

m.

11; 2]

SS 7]

37 0- 5:17

1

7

Direction

pirection is an important function of management. Its main objective is to work done through others for the attainment of organizational goals. For the work the manager has to direct and guide the employees, otherwise it is found to run the organization. Thus, Direction/Operation includes giving to the subordinates, motivating and giving good leadership to the wordinates. Hence, George. R. Terry has called direction, as 'actuating'.

Concept of Direction Or Meaning and Definition of Direction

Generally, direction/operation means giving orders. But in terms of magement function, direction means instructing, guiding leadership, supervising motivating the subordinates to function towards the attainment of minizational objectives.

Meaning and concept of direction, can be stated on the basis of the following

- l. In the words of Ernest Dale, "Direction is telling people what to do and wing what they do to the best of their ability."
- 2. According to Marshall E. Dimock, "The heart of administration is the intering function which involves determining the course, giving orders and interiors, providing the dynamic leadership."
- 3. According to Urwick and Brech, "Direction is the guidance, the impiration, the leadership of those men and women who constitute the real core the responsibilities of management".
- 4. According to Theo Haimann, "Direction consists of the processes and techniques utilized in issuing instructions and making certain, that the reations are carried on as originally planned."
- According to Koont'z and O'Donnel, "Direction is a complex function includes all those actions which are designed to encourage subordinates to effectively and efficiently in both, the short and long run."

Marsage

Thus, direction means the function which is performed by the manager for organizational objectives and it includes instructing, good for the manager for the organization of organization organization of organization of organization Thus, direction means the function that the includes instructing, and the attainment of organizational objectives and it includes instructing, guiding the attainment of organizational objectives and it includes instructing, guiding motivating and supervising employees.

Characteristics or Nature of Direction

After study and assessment of all the above definitions, following characteristics of direction are highlighted:

- 1. An Important and Separate Function of Management: Direction is a function among managerial works. Without dis 1. An Important and Separate function among managerial works. Without direction important and separate function among managerial works. Without direction is like a companion functions are useless. Direction is like a important and separate function and useless. Direction is like a starter, staffing, planning and organizing functions are useless. Direction is like a starter,
- 2. Pervasive Activity: Direction is performed in all forms of organization whether big or small, it is a function performed at all levels of management. This whether big of small, it is a same whether big of small, it is a same with the function is also required in all spheres, like political, religious, cultural and others.
- 3. Consists of many Activities: Direction consists of many activities which includes instructing, guiding, motivating, supervising the employees etc.
- 4. Continuous and Dynamic Process: Direction is a continuous process as it continues till the organization runs. The manager has to continuously guide and instruct the subordinates. It is a dynamic process too, because as per circumstances and business environment its policy, techniques and concepts changes.
- 5. Wide Function: It is very wide in its scope as it does not include only guiding the organization instructing the employees but also in motivating, leading, communicating and supervising the employees.
- 6. Flow of Direction: Direction flows from the top to the bottom, because a superior always guides, instructs, and supervises the subordinates. It never flows from bottom to top.
- 7. Management in Action: This function of management brings the management into action. It basically mobilizes the human and physical resources for the attainment of organizational objectives.
- 8. Connecting and Co-ordinating function: It is a connecting and coordinating function as an organization which cannot attain its objectives just by making the plans, but the execution of the plans is important for success. Direction is a function of is a function of management co-ordinates the plans with the actual performance and the manager supervises and directs his subordinates to work towards the attainment of organizational objectives.
- 9. Development of People: Direction guides and instructs the subordinates which gradually make them learn to work on their own, thus, it develops the ability of people. of people.
  - 10. Balancing in Two-fold Objectives: Direction has a two-fold objectives first being achieving a organization is to attain The first being achieving a organizational objectives and the second is to attaching the personal objectives of the applications. the personal objectives of the employees. Direction with proper leadership of both create a balance in the attainment of both the objectives.

pirel

envi to th

with subc

> relat follo

dire ende

the t to e said obje

> coll labo mar

eve ach

sub prir offi

diff etc.

sho The 50

the

eff of

R SO DOBSZ110 NEG NOV 2020 EXP

Direction

ager for guiding lowing

on is an irection starter.

ization, nt. This others,

s which

y guide as per ncepts

e only flows

gs the ources

nd coust by ection

nance is the

nates, bility

tives. attain may Work Environment: Direction creates a healthy working

Creates work employees, which motivates them to work with own desire

The for the employees, which motivates them to work with own desire

Work Related to Human Resources: Direction

Work Related to Human Resources: Direction has a direct relation resources. Thus, the leader instructs, guides and supervises the main and motivates for the attainment of organizational objectives.

Principles of Direction

Principles of Direction Or Essentials of Effective Direction

Direction is related to people. It not only develops the persons, but has direct with them. However, it is a difficult task to understand them. Hence, few principles are required to be kept in view to understand, guide and

1. Principle of Harmony of Objectives: Every person in the enterprise to achieve some personal objective. On the contrary, the objective of achiever is to earn the profits. Hence, an efficient Director should make efforts to coordination among both these objectives. That is why, Fayol has "The objectives of the enterprise should be given the priority over the personal actives."

1. Principle of Maximum Individual Contribution: Organization is a sective effort. Its objectives can be fulfilled, only through maximum efforts, how, interest and devotion of all its officers and the employees. Hence, the supers should adopt such technique or method of direction, which may induce subordinate employee to make maximum possible contribution towards dievement of group objectives.

3. Principle of Unity of Command: This principle states that at a time, the abordinate employee should get orders, only from one boss. This is an accepted miciple that no subordinate can efficiently comply the orders of more than one fixer, at a time. If this principle is violated, situation like duplication of orders, differences, mutual rift, violation of instruction and disorder in the organization, at may emerge and devotion of the employees also gets disturbed.

4. Principle of Direct Supervision: According to this principle, the managers fould themselves supervise work of their subordinate, during course of work. Their style of supervision should include elements of being liberal and co-operative, a that they may well understand the problems of their subordinates and solve the problems, amicably, so as to boost up the morale and trust of the employees.

5. Principle of Effective Communication: According to principle of Sective communication, direction can be made effective only in the atmosphere Mutual Trust'. Hence, it is essential that:

(i) The managers should ensure that the concerned persons have well understood the policies, functions, plans and the responsibilities,

(ii) The managers should understand that upwards communication is also as important, as is the downwards communication,

(iii) The managers should develop two way communication method exchange,

Oil

di

thi of

th de

10

DE

30 sh

ol

Si

ŀ

V

d

t

•

8

-

ŧ

-

exchange,

(iv) It should also be ensured that the communication is clear, under attractive and prompt, and attractive and prompt, and

(v) It should be kept in view that the message to be communicated to the complete and understandable.

(v) It should be kept in view that the message to be communicated to the complete and understandable.

- 6. Principle of Effective Leadership: The objective of direction is to work from the subordinates. However, it is possible, only when the officer the quality of good leadership. Hence, for effective leadership, an officer leader, should properly guide and advise his subordinates, regarding their and personality. It will enable him to secure the trust of his subordinates and desired work from them.
- 7. Principle of Good Human Relations: Good human relations facing the functions of direction. According to this principle, an officer should human behave with his equal ranking officers and employees. As a result, he will be to secure their co-operation, they will have faith in him and the managers will able to easily provide guidance to their subordinates in friendly atmosphere.
- 8. Principle of Continuous Awareness: According to this principle to determination of the policies and passing of orders is not the end of the duties of managers. Rather, they should always remain alert and conscious to see, whether the employees are working, in accordance with the policies, or not? If they are working against the instruction, corrective actions should be promptly taken.
- 9. Principle of Supplemental Use of Informal Organization: Informal organizations and relations are generally not proper, from the view of the management, since at times, they spread false news and rumours and also encourages the employees to disobey the instructions of their officers. However, the efficient managers should use the informal organization as a support system and the supplemental to the formal organization. It will add to the satisfaction of the employees and mutual co-operation will develop. Thus, the compliance of orders and directions may be made, with the help of this principle.
- 10. Principle of Continuous Follow-up: Direction is a continuous process. Hence, this principle lays emphasis on the need of continuous follow-up of implementation of the orders-directions given for effective direction. Efforts should be made to obviate the mistakes and defeciencies and improvements should be enforced, quite continuously. Besides, the managers should be continuously conscious towards the activities of their subordinates.
- 11. Principle of Participative Decision-making: Participation of individuals and the groups in decision-making process is essential for effects direction. For that, their ideas and suggestions should be invited and necessary advice may also be taken. Besides that, the decisions may be taken also operational levels or around those levels to enhance the quality of the decisions.
- 12. Principle of Effective Control: Direction cannot be fully effective without the existence of competent, refined informations and adjusted mechanism for surveillance regarding the behaviour and the performance.

Irection

Opl.

of free

undable.

ated is to take cer has er, as a r work nd take cilitate umanly be able will be re.

le, the s of the hether ley are

n. formal of the d also wever, vstem ion of nce of ocess. of the hould ild be ously

of the ective essary at tho sions. ective

ontrol nakes

Managers capable to take the corrective actions, in case of deviations from the managers capable.

Importance of Direction

Direction is one of the most important functions of management, because in Direction is one direction, other functions of management, because in the absence of proper direction, other functions of management i.e. planning, we absence staffing etc. cannot be successful. Thus, Marshall F Direction, staffing etc. members of protection of management i.e. planning, staffing etc. cannot be successful. Thus, Marshall E. Dimock has said with heart of administration is the directing function. "The heart of administration is the directing function which involves are ining the course, giving orders and instructions "The near course, giving orders and instructions, providing the dynamic

Koontz and O'Donnel have said that "Direction is related to work Rounce. A person can make plans, can do staffing function but he may not leadership". priormance. It is the time he instructs his subordinates what has to be done. In this success till the time he instructs his subordinates what has to be done. In short, the importance of direction can be explained as follows:

1. Easy Attainment of Objectives: Direction helps to achieve the personal bjectives of the employees also, along with achieving the organizational objectives, since:

- (a) It tells the people what they are supposed to do.
- (b) It provides leadership to the employees by supervising and motivating them, so that they may contribute towards achieving the objectives.
- (c) Prepares a healthy environment to achieve organizational objectives.
- (d) Improves the efficiency of the employees by issuing instructions and
- (e) Maintains co-ordination between the organizational and personal

2. Accomplishment of Work: Explaining the importance of direction, Theo Haiman has said that as a car cannot run without an accelerator, in the same way without direction the subordinates cannot operate their work. Thus, without direction or guidance, the subordinates may not work.

3. Success of Plans: Direction's main objective is to get the work done through subordinates. Thus, its function explains how and what work has to be done by the done by the employees. This function motivates, supervises and directs the employees to tmployees to work towards the attainment of organizational objectives. It has been oply stated by aptly stated by a scholar, "Full utilization of organization, relations and competent employees is possible, only be efficient direction."

4. Basis of Success of Business Organization: It is the basis of success of business organization. It gives instructions and guidance to the employees stating for the work. how the work has to be done to accomplish the task. It is just like a strategy for the war, as the the war, as the warriors are instructed by the captain that how they have to fight to achieve successions. to achieve success.

5. Best Utilization of Resources: It helps in the best utilization of resources, bridges the combined and gives necessary Best Utilization of Resources: It helps in the best utilization and gives necessary it bridges the gap between planning and actual execution and gives necessary guidance to the subordinates which is necessary for the achievement w organizational goals.

- 6. Obtaining Knowledge of Human-being: Direction is managerial to the Company of 6. Obtaining Knowledge of Action helps the managers to know various human better their emotions, needs and capabilities. As without their emotions, needs and capabilities. It is human oriented. Direction helps meeds and capabilities. As without known and their aspirations, their emotions, needs and capabilities. As without known and their aspirations, their emotions, needs and capabilities. As without known and their aspirations, their emotions, needs and capabilities. As without known and their aspirations are human being direction function is not possible. and their aspirations, their characteristics as human being direction function is not possible. Thus the subordinates as human being direction function of a subordinates as human being direction function of a subordinates. the subordinates as fluttual the subordinates, then perform the function of dinest manager first knows about the subordinates, then perform the function of dinest manager first knows about the subordinates, then perform the function of dinest manager first knows about the subordinates, then perform the function of dinest manager first knows about the subordinates, then perform the function of dinest manager first knows about the subordinates, then perform the function of dinest manager first knows about the subordinates, then perform the function of dinest manager first knows about the subordinates, then perform the function of dinest manager first knows about the subordinates are subordinates.
- 7. Easy Management of Changes: In practice, most of the persons oppose 7. Easy Management of the change is essential the changes. However, due to several reasons, enforcing change is essential to the changes. However, due to several reasons, enforcing change is essential to the changes. well. Direction being a dynamic and continuous process, it is helpful in table managing the changes, as follows:
  - (i) Change may be executed by developing effective communication and dynamic system.
  - (ii) The change may be made easy.
  - (iii) Resistance, doubts and apprehensions towards the changes may be obviated, by way of proper guidance and motivation.
  - (iv) The thoughts and behaviour of people may be made favourable to the changes through suitable motivation and leadership, which may not be possible by orders and directions.

As a result of all these, people not only accept the changes, rather they start taking interest also, in the new changes.

- 8. Establishment of Effective Co-ordination: It helps to establish as ordination among the various departments and their work, as it provides effective guidance and leadership. At the same time, it helps to keep good relations with the external parties of business like customers, suppliers of goods, government etc.
- 9. Improvement in Work Efficiency: Direction motivates the employees to contribute to the best of their capabilities for the attainment of organizational goals. This is possible because of effective guidance, leadership and communication. This results in improving worker's efficiency.
- 10. Helps in Integrating Various Functions of Management : Direction's a link between management and its other functions. The primary functions of management are planning, organizing, staffing and the last is controlling. Direction helps in maintaining co-ordination among all functions of management. In the absence of direction function other functions of management are a failure.
- 11. Development of Managerial Ability: Direction develops managerial vand skills. The reason its that the last of the same of ability and skills. The reason its that while issuing instructions to the subordinate the superiors develops their skills at the subordinate the superiors develops their skills at the subordinate the subordinate their skills at the skills at th the superiors develops their skills also. It also helps to judge the human being and their emotions. and their emotions.
- 12. Understanding Reasonable Behaviour: It helps the managers to understand the plans, policies and problems of the organization. As a result acts in a reasonable manner as per demanders activit are the

do a v to mol that th in the

the su But at amour is real

3 and it is mai object organ direct > work to we finan

subor work leade

> other Thus

subo

the s the com time

Vari

Scope or Components of Direction Or Techniques of Direction

The mechniques of direction means that process which involve a lot of Now the question arises what are the techniques of direction? Following

1 Orders and Instructions: Issuing orders or instructions to do or not to a technique. It helps not only to get the work done but it also helps a technique subordinates to work. But in order to achieve success, it is important article orders should be issued by only one person and they should be practical after approach.

2. Delegation of Authority: It is another technique. Under this technique subordinates are given powers so that they can perform their duties effectively. It is the time of delegation of authority, it should be ensured that a reasonable munt of authority should be delegated, it should neither be more than that what sequired nor it should be less.

3. Discipline: Discipline helps to get the work done in an organized manner mitalso ensures that there is a healthy work environment.

4. Co-ordination: This is a component of direction in which co-ordination small among the work and the departments of the organization so that the distrives can be achieved. Co-ordination is important for smooth working of the manization. Better co-ordination among the various factors is an indicator of good function.

5. Motivation: It is a technique in which people are made to perform their wind willingly. This technique helps to satisfy the employees and motivates them a work better. In order to motivate the employees, various financial and non-immigial methods are used.

6. Supervision: Supervision means overseeing the activities of the modinates. This includes a direct contact with the subordinates, allotment of providing them with inputs to carry on the work and providing them effective telephip. Thus, by supervising the superiors, maintain a direct contact with the modinates.

7. Leadership: Leadership is the technique of influencing the behaviour of leader this technique, the leader uses his skill to influence the subordinates.

In this technique helps the subordinates to work willingly.

A. Communication: Under this technique the superior issue instructions to the subordinates and the subordinates follow them and work accordingly. But at the same time, the superior has to ensure that there is no confusion while the superior has to ensure that there is no confusion. In modern the communication is the biggest enemy of communication. There are means and methods of communication, which are used these days.

Scanned with CamScanner

33

ne of work leings wing

s, the ation poor

easily as n and ay be to the y start

sh colective

s with nment

loyees ational

o and

tion is ons of ection

In the

inates beings

ers to ult he